Racial (In)Equity

Why is it important?
America will not be able to continue to compete on a global scale without decreasing racial disparities and improving outcomes for young children of color, a major part of our future workforce.

U.S. Census Bureau, 2015

More than half of children born in the U.S. are of color.

What is racial equity?

Equality = sameness
In the picture on the left, everyone gets the same size box, yet they still don’t have a view of the game. Equality promotes fairness by giving everyone the same thing, one box. BUT, it can only work if everyone starts from the same place.

Equity = fairness
In the picture on the right, each person gets enough boxes to give them a view of the game. We must first ensure EQUITY, everyone with a view of the same. It’s about making sure people get access to the same opportunities.

How can we achieve racial equity?
If we see one fish floating face up we might wonder what was wrong with the fish, but if we see most fish floating face up, maybe we should begin to wonder what is wrong with the water.

Learn more from the FPG RACE committee! http://fpg.unc.edu/emphasis-area/race-ethnicity-linguistic-cultural-and-socioeconomic-diversity

Attend a racial equity workshop
Pay attention to what is going on in your community – attend board meetings and talk with elected officials.

Read!

Have questions? Email us: FPG_RACE@unc.edu

The statistical portrait of the US population broken out by race reveals persistent disparities between people of color and white people in almost every indicator.

Our society has created barriers to opportunities based on race.

Racial equity is the condition that would be achieved if one’s racial identity no longer predicted, in a statistical sense, how one fares.